Let's Start!

What kind of fish do you like to eat?

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about travel and vacations in social situations.

Ask your partner:

- Do you like to eat fish? Why or why not?
- How do you prepare your fish? On the grill? In the oven?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about food.
- I can ask and provide information in a public place.
- I can ask who, what, when, where questions.

Let's Explore!

Vanessa buys some fish at the market. How much is it all together?

* "All together" means in total.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Vanessa: Good morning!
Fishmonger: Hello, there! What can I do for you today?
Vanessa: This is my first time buying fish.
Fishmonger: OK, what kind of fish do you like to eat?
Vanessa: Salmon, trout, tilapia ...
Fishmonger: We have each of those selections over here. How do you plan to prepare the fish?
Vanessa: Hmm ... what do you recommend?
Fishmonger: I think that getting a fillet of salmon and grilling it is best.
Vanessa: OK.
Fishmonger: How many people are you serving?
Vanessa: Just my aunt and I.
Fishmonger: So, I can give you two fillets of salmon and two salmon steaks.
Vanessa: What's the difference?
Fishmonger: The steaks are bigger and best on the barbecue.
Vanessa: How much is that all together?
Fishmonger: $25.00.
Vanessa: Thank you very much.

Talking About Food

There are several ways to prepare food. When you talk about preparing food, you use verbs to talk about the actions you do.

You can grill it (on the barbecue or a small grill at home).

You can fry it (in a pan on the stove).

You can boil it (in water).

You can bake it (in the oven).

Examples:

- Grilling fish is the best way to prepare it.
- I like to fry my fish in garlic and olive oil.
- I prefer to bake the fish in the oven with potatoes.
